SPECIAL ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION ZONES

SEA TURTLE SATELLITE MONITORING PROJECT

Sea turtles are creatures that migrate between feeding, wintering and nesting areas. For this reason, it is not enough to protect the nesting areas of these creatures, which are of great importance for marine life. Knowing which areas and countries they visited during migration and outside the breeding season is of great importance for the protection of those habitats and for taking protection measures. For this reason, follow-up studies with satellite tracking devices are carried out by sea turtle researchers.

SPECIAL ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION ZONES

The caretta caretta, which was named Lara, was found on 15 October 2026 in Göynük, injured and in poor health due to the plastics she ate. She was rehabilitated by DTK-MÜR (Sea Turtles Research, Rescue and Rehabilitation Center) with the support of Lara Barut Collection.
